It's insane people voting for Trump due to high prices and economy when Trump is talking about making every import 20% more expensive and Elon over here admitting he's going to crash the economy. Inflation was global and we fared better than any other country.

I'm guilty of having so many poor takes on the election. I thought:

1. Trump's ceiling was 47% of the vote
2. Trump could never win the popular vote
3. Women would carry Harris over the finish line.

Admittedly I was wrong about it all. Though I was right about Harris being a poor candidate and Biden putting the Dem party in a difficult position by refusing to drop out sooner.

As always the Dem party will not learn from their mistakes.

However you can't even be mad with the result because the democratic process worked as intended and Americans preferred Trump. Looks like he will win the popular vote too.

To me, aside from surface risks eg he has a button on nuclear weapons, the climate issue is the true existential threat. There's a narrow window for humanity and we cannot close the gap without the US.

But it's not a risk that people can perceive or accurately weigh from day to day life. It's not like the price of bread

My opinion is that we're done. Gone. Trump being elected the first time in 2016 was the nail in the coffin. Anything since then has been false hope, if any hope.

Hell, Gore losing ("losing") Florida in 2000 was the probably last real chance we had to turn things around.

It's so much worse than you think.

Trump will win over 300 electoral votes. He will win the popular vote.

Republicans are winning the presidency, the senate, and likely the house. They have the majority of governor seats. They have the Supreme Court.

This is honestly worst case scenario for Democrats. Major steps back for the party and for America.

Say Byebye to gay marriage, say bye to secularism, say bye to social safety nets, say bye to healthcare, say bye to unions, say bye to equal opportunities, say bye to Ukraine, say bye to Palestine, say bye to NATO, say bye to public education.

Now we'll see a rise in costs, lower pay, less rights for workers, less safety standards in all industry, more pollution, more inequality.

But yeah, eggs are a little more expensive than 4 years ago before we had a global pandemic in which we blew up the budget deficit and buried 1.5 million people.

Like it or not, this is the cost of democracy.

If he wins the popular vote and wins the presidency thanks to the EC, this country deserves whatever hell it gets for the next four years.

Fuck them.

The ENTIRE country has shifted right, significantly so in some areas. The democrats have a real crisis which they have to contend with.

521 Reply

hideki101 • 2mo ago •

They were right. This election was all about three specific issues: economy, price inflation, and crime. Even if there's evidence that the Biden administration did good in those areas, the popular opinion of the country is that he didn't do it. I just wish that more people would research positions rather than going off vibes.

the economy ranked proportionally less highly on voters' lists of paramount issues than in previous elections. MAGA support in Trump rallies seemed to be waning and Harris' camp seemed so (in retrospect irrationally) confident.

What the heck was going on behind the scenes? Did women claim abortion mattered much more than it really did in their decision making? Did low information disengaged voters just split for Trump at the last minute? Is there some narrative with inflation that I've just been missing or has Harris just done a really poor job in conveying how inflationary rates have dipped back to 2% this year? Why was Walz so ineffective in helping Harris in the Midwest? Did voters really like Vance more than I gave him credit for?

I know there's a core base of hardcore MAGA voters who will follow Trump to the pits of hell and back, but I'm more interested in how he managed to convince the independents and why the media's been so blindsided. The rallies seemed so ineffectual and Trump himself seemed so low energy in this last month. Many of Trump's own allies were skeptical on his chances. It's just...weird.

The big take away for the Dems is you HAVE to run an open and fair primary.

2016 Hillary was handed it because it was "her turn". She lost.

2020 had a big open primary and Dem voters selected Biden. He won.

2024 obviously was given to Harris because Biden was too full of himself to step down before a full primary could be ran. She lost.

Im sure in a primary in 2024 Harris doesn't win.

Look at her numbers up to Oct 15 and then afterwards. It's a steady decline. That's when Elon Musk started dumping money into Trumps campaign through his PAC and others.

This money funded the massive ad buy blasting swing states with the trans prisoner commercials and the ones about murdering immigrants.

Her numbers tanked as these ads and their messages hit their mark. Without Musk's money, Trump's campaign could not have afforded it Biden would have been worse than Kamala tonight. Kamala was never able to articulate that she would be a massive break from Biden. by running to close to his admin voters didn't have a reason to believe inflation wouldn't happen again. like Carter, inflation wasn't Biden's fault and like then the incumbent president admin is paying the price.

People are fine voting for abortion protections but didn't feel they needed Harris for it.

Michigan Muslims felt betrayed by Dems silence on Gaza.

Latinos aren't as repulsed by Trump's rhetoric as Dems insist they should be.

Young men seem to have cast a "protest vote" for Trump?

Trump will likely win the popular vote. Voters turnout is crazy high. Voters came out and rejected Harris.

Dems need to study this for real this time not like 2016

The US is a right wing conservative country, no one with actual progressive ideas (not that Kamala/Biden were) is ever going to come close to winning.

There will never be universal healthcare, education, fair treatment of workers, fair economic policies etc - because people are too brainwashed and call them 'socialist'.

And what we have is socialism for the rich elite, and the idiot population who keeps voting to keep it that way.

this is what the people deserve

I guess it's time to see just how bad it can get. They caught the car, just how much suffering will they impose with their renewed power and what cost to society will it take before they back off. Are they really going to deport all of those immigrants, illegal and legal alike? Ban gender affirming care for all? Ban gay marriage again? Ban abortion nationwide? Dissolve the education department? I mean how far are they going to drag the country away from its norms and when people start getting mad, how willing will they be to use force to quell it. I guess we are going to find out.

The fact that a convicted felon who tried to overturn the last election not only won electorally but also secured the popular vote does not make America look good at all. Project 2025, more Supreme Court picks, giving Ukraine to Russia, and many more AWFUL policy positions that will impact the entire planet for decades. Safe to say that America is practically dead at this point.

Feeling real “this is how Bernie can still win” right now the democrats could have won in 2016 if they ran literally anyone beside hillary. everyone in the country had an opinion on her one way or the other due to her polarizing lifetime in public life. like her or dislike her, thats a fact, she was polarizing. the democrats could have picked any random senator or governor from a flyover state and used their statistical electoral advantage over a wildcard like trump.

its a known fact that obama literally begged RBG to retire while he was president but she assumed hillary would win and wanted to have a girl power ceremony where hillary appointed a female judge to replace her. what a joke for that to be how someone on the supreme court acts.

two of the biggest feminist figures of the last 50 years were directly responsible for roe v. wade being overturned due to their egos and the arrogance of the democrats trying to shove hillary down the country's throat and RBG caring more about her yasss queen pop culture popularity than preserving women's reproductive rights. just a sad sight all around

I can't believe the Trump campaign relied on young white males... and they actually came through in droves.

Where are all the women voters? The Harris campaign was depending on them.

66 Reply

Vindicare605 • 2mo ago •

Trump has won the majority of the white women's vote in both 2016 and 2020. I'll bet money he won them again in 2024.

Democrats need to stop pretending that they have they have the women's vote locked up by simply nominating a woman. It doesn't work like that. Women aren't a unified political force. If they were, then this never would have been a race to begin with.

Trump for the economy? Pfffthahaha oh my god you guys did no research! What a shock! Go see what tariff's do to the price of goods if you think current inflation is bad. Oh and what policy did Trump pass that helped the economy during his term again? Oh, what? He passed literally no actual economic policy and his economic growth was almost solely Obama's policy? Awkward...

Maybe if you're lucky you'll get a renewal on that expiring tax cut! Oh but people like me will have to get an extra one on top of the one that didn't expire. It's only fair. I need to be even richer. Maybe... a third rental property for this defense contractor?

(To my fellows that tried to stop this, my deepest sympathies. I'll keep donating to places in blue areas for those in need.)

agencies. We will have RFK Jr. in charge of the CDC. We will have no NOAA, we will have no checks and balances. We will have no department of education. We will be stripped of just about every single right we've fought for over the last 150 years for the working class.

The right to clean air? Gone. The right to pollution free water? Gone. The right to know if your house is about to be hit by a hurricane? Gone. The right to get a decent high-school education without going into mountains of debt? Gone. The ability to easily pay taxes, use the federal mail service, go to the DMV and renew your license? Gone.

These are all things outlined clearly in Project 2025, and I'm not even listing 1/10th of the atrocities they want to implement.

You really want to hear the bad ones? Elon Musk/Trump will likely accelerate the U.S. towards a central digital banking currency where the government has the ability to watch over your entire finances, and grants them the ability to control your finances as well. Pretty much all laws that are pro-union, pro-worker, pro-women, pro-minority, will be removed. The FTC and SEC will be disbanded, allowing corporations free rein over your daily life without restriction. And completely forget about any sort of regulation on climate change, AI, internet privacy, etc.

And oh yeah, there's also all the Christian theocracy BS shoved in there too.

Yeah... this is not looking good. Time to stock up on canned food and bullets.

Trump is a fascist who loves dictators, has sexually assaulted women, is a felon, and is just a manipulative con man in general, and it's disturbing that anyone would want to vote for him. I question their thought process and I question why they're not able to see through his con.

I'm disappointed in anyone who would look at him and actually think he's deserving of being president, and "disappointed" is an understatement. I'm being nice.

So no, I'm not going to change my mind on this and have some epiphany where I think "Omg, I should have been more sympathetic and understanding toward Trump supporters! I'm so sorry!" No. That's not how I feel.

You Trump supporters want me to criticize Harris, but no. I'm criticizing you. You are the one who voted for a dictator. You are the one who voted for someone who bragged on video about sexually assaulting women. You are the one who voted for someone who said it's sometimes it's okay to "terminate" the Constitution. You voted for that. That's not Harris' fault. That's on you.

(No, I'm not saying that after the fact, I've made posts on this subreddit saying that picking Kamala was a horrible idea before and immediately after she was chosen.)

So I blame Biden for this, for not quitting after one mandate and allowing a primary. I blame Kamala for trying to grab power instead of thinking about who was most likely to beat Trump. I blame the Democratic Party for hiding Biden's mental state for so long, and for picking Kamala. I blame Democratic voters for not pushing harder against Kamala. I blame the other possible Democratic nominees for not pushing harder for themselves, no doubt thinking that they'd have a better shot in 2028.

But of course most of all, I blame the American people for being too stupid to see what Trump is and what it means for the USA, and the world.

Trump will have the House and Senate. Get ready for a national abortion ban. Democrats could have codified abortion right under Obama and they didn't, but whatever. Good bye IVF too. And birth control access. Massive inflation incoming when Trump Tariffs come. A likely war in Europe when Putin invades Poland and were out of NATO. Of course that will embolden China to take Taiwan, so good bye cheap microchips. 1 million people deported haphazardly per year, so no workers to do anything. Home mortgage rates through the fucking roof as the bond market will punish the government for fiscal irresponsibility. Good bye department of Education. Good bye EPA. Something messed up is going to happen to the FBI. And Elon Musk will slash the federal budget by 1/3 which will trigger a massive recession. This is what your Trump vote got you.

on the court with Clarence Thomas and Samuel Alito likely retiring under Trump's tenure. Right now is absolute rock bottom for Democrats, so if there's any light at the end of the tunnel it can only really improve from here on out. 2028 will have a brand new field of candidates hopefully.

The senate is lost. It's likely we won't see Democrat control of the senate for a very long time as well. Congress is likely going to stay Red as well. This is a disaster on every level for the Democrats and the DNC.

I'm sure many will come to regret their decisions on this day in the future, I'm sure there's plenty of regrets and blame to go around for Kamala, Biden and the entire DNC establishment.

I'm mostly concerned with what will happen in Ukraine, I'm very worried about how emboldened Russia and China are going to become knowing they have someone that can be manipulated with basically unchecked power in the US. We can turn towards the mid-terms in 2026 to try and check Trump's power but without the senate it's pretty much a pointless endeavor.

Man, the history around this period of time is going to be fascinating, if there's any bright side to all of this. We are really living through unprecedented times and the books that will be written on this election in the future are going to be some very interesting reads.

How does defunding the educational system help? How does defunding health care help? The tariffs he will impose on foreign goods will be paid by the consumer! You think companies will just eat the cost? No. They’ll mark up the product.

Elon Musk has OPENLY said he’s gonna fucking kill the economy. Things have to get worse before they get better he said.

You know who things won’t get worse for? Rich people will see huge tax cuts. So will corporations. Who do we think it going to be buying everything up when he “resets” the economy? Us? Absolutely not.

Musk and Trump just got the population to vote themselves into a worse position long term.

Yall are dooming on the wrong things.

Presidents come and go, but SCOTUS judges are what actually drive the direction of the country and now Trump will be able to put whomever he wants in the court since he now also has a simple majority in the senate. He has a rubber stamp.

He will install at minimum 2 judges during his term and these judges will be there for 30+ years. Trump will have installed FIVE (of 9) judges to the court.

THIS is what you should be most upset about.

This is from a 10-year-old article by the CATO Institute:

> In hard times, many people are often willing to go along with and support terrible things that would be unthinkable in good times.
> Those who dismiss the possibility of a dictatorial regime in America need to consider possible developments that could make our circumstances worse and politically more volatile than they are now — like runaway government spending, soaring taxes, more wars, inflation and economic collapse.
> Aspiring dictators sometimes give away their intentions by their evident desire to destroy opponents.
> There's no reliable way to prevent bad or incompetent people from gaining power.
> Ultimately, liberty can be protected only if people care enough to fight for it, because everywhere governments push for more power, and they never give it up willingly.

As a European, I must say that whatever happens now, you deserved it. I really hope you'll prove me wrong, but I think the US is showing to be an unreliable partner and we should be less dependent on American defence and cultural influences. But again, I just hope I'm wrong.

This smells like 1930s Germany all over again, with the exact same rhetoric and polarization. Maybe with a little Russian/Hungarian/Brazilian authoritarianism sprinkled on top of it. The main difference is that 1930 Germany was subtle about it. It took a major war with 75 million deaths to get to our senses last time. Let's hope that this is not necessary now, because we now have nukes instead of firebombs. Almost nobody who witnessed the absolute horrors of that war is alive now. Seems we have forgotten about it.

Now I'm not only blaming "the right". I'm also blaming "the left" for being unable to stop this chaos and address legitimate concerns like income inequality and immigration 20 years ago. I think we need an oldschool center-left politician with the populist charisma of Trump, but a focus on improving the lives and self-worth of people who seem to have been left behind. Preferably someone younger than 60 years.

Of course I realize (and hope) that I may be mistaken here, and that 99% of Trump voters truly want the best for their country. I hope that I'm wrong and just brainwashed by "leftist" media. I want the best for you too. But I know a fair bit of politics history around the world, and Trump is a classical demagogue with a deeply corrupt Republican backing that does not seem to care for freedom of the press, human rights, factuality, or democratic institutions. The trans-atlantic alliance was a cornerstone of Western prosperity and stability since WW2, and I really fear this is now crumbling apart.

Rant over

To everyone who voted for Trump:

Fuck you. You have destroyed this country, all because you can’t stand change, can’t fathom the idea of healthy debate, want to force everyone to think like you or die. You have the NERVE to call yourself a patriot, an upstanding citizen, and dare I say a human.

You are none of these. You have sold this country out to hate, to ignorance, to genocide. Come January 20, barring some huge event, this country will become the Third Reich on steroids. Our ancestors fought in WWII to end fascist tyranny, and now, thanks to you and your petty hatred for people who don’t look or think like you, history will repeat.

I just hope that when the people inevitably rebel, the military will be loyal to the Constitution and not an unhinged, psychotic dictator with access to nuclear launch codes.

All truly pointless. Stupid dreams and stories that are long dead now in this world.

In all honesty, why should any of this matter to me? I'm not rich, powerful, or influential. In the grand scheme of things I'm just a nobody-just a naive person living in a world that will tear itself apart and let the strong survive.

This is pointless. Such hate will be welcomed from all sides now. No true building back at this point in our lives. Ego will demand ego in return, until drastic changes are made so one side will always be the dominant.

Dumb. Naive. Pointless....but facts, not the fiction I enjoyed growing up.

I really don't think people have registered just how HUGE of a realignment this is yet. The Republicans will have 54 or 55 seats in the Senate, 2 Supreme Court seats to fill, and very possibly a trifecta. We like to clown on the conservatives and say they don't have any policy goals, but the next two years will show whether or not that's true. They will be able to govern largely unopposed and the nation will see what it really means to live under a Republican government.

Yes, we had that in 2016-18, but the Senate was tight enough that moderates could hold things up. That won't be the case this time around.

So what is the actual plan from a Trump administration and GOP lead government? I haven't heard anything about actual policy or an actual plan to address housing, cost of living, climate change (look at NC, Florida, and how damn hot it's been. It's real) etc.

All I've heard is they will perform mass deportations and put tariffs on everyone (which is just going to make everything more expensive for us, the consumer). Other than that they just insult or belittle people they don't agree with.

So seriously, what is the plan? I want to hear what republicans actually voted for and think will happen and how things will get better.

This confirms that the MAGA movement is absolutely real and huge, and we have to start getting concerned about the movement outliving Trump himself.

Preface: Kamala supporter here.

I hate seeing posts like “I can’t believe how many racist, misogynistic pieces of shit exist in my country.”

Those posts are part of the problem. Dems generalize every Trump supporter as racist or misogynistic when the reality is there’s only a vocal minority of supporters who are that way. The rest are people who think the country is heading the wrong way and go “Why would I vote for someone who has been driving the wheel for the last 4 years?” They don’t have to like or agree with what everything he says, they just have to believe that Trump will be better for them. It’s that simple.

68+ million people are not all racist or misogynistic, stop labeling them as such.

This is a sizeable win for Trump.

With the Republicans in control of the House, Senate and Presidency, I foresee a lot of changes in the next 2 years which will have long lasting consequences.

I hope the US electorate will not come to regret this in a few years time. Best of luck to all US citizens.

I'm just looking forward to seeing if there are any redhats who, when they realize that "disinflation" doesn't bring down prices necessarily, and deflation will bring down prices as well as the entire economy, if they'll admit that maybe their guy didn't have the answers.

Like - what do they honestly think he will do that will fix things? Biden already pumps more oil than we've ever seen the US pump. Reviving the keystone pipeline really won't do much to US prices, and if it did, it would take years to have any real effect.

Tariffs on random Chinese stuff when you're not trying to protect a fragile domestic industry is only going to drive prices upward (which is the definition of inflation).

There wasn't, there isn't, and there never will be a health care plan. If they repeal the ACA, millions of marketplace users in red states are going to die. Flat out. Either they won't be able to afford insurance or they'll get insurance but will be barred from any coverage for some time due to "preexisting conditions."

But hey - at least the 0.4-0.6% of trans people won't convert everyone's kids into trans people! At least that 0.4-0.6% of trans people won't be watching everyone's little girls pee in public bathrooms despite that not being a thing.

Like - when can I go to a redhat and ask them "is the economy better for you yet? What happened that made it better?"

have no idea how the economy works. They complain about genocide but have no idea how unfriendly Trump will be to Palestinians. They don't care about Project 2025, they just care about themselves in the now and don't think about the long term of the future for their neighbors.

In 4 years they'll still be unhappy and vote D and the cycle repeats.The only way to break the cycle is to get educated. Our country is fucked nationally for the next 4 years, but we can make sure we get good people elected locally to support education.

You know who I blame? Biden. If he has stuck to his promise of being a 1 term president and allowed a full primary to select someone Democrats were fully behind and that could actually have a year of more to come up with a winning strategy, yes probably a white guy in his 60s, this election would be flipped right now.

Coming from a largely blue-collar area, I feel that the Democratic Party has lost touch with blue-collar workers. I've mentioned this on Reddit before, but I still can't understand how blue-collar workers can support a white-collar multimillionaire. It seems to come down to a deep mistrust of the Democratic Party. This is especially surprising to me, given that Trump has openly opposed unions and workers' rights. I believe this shift in trust is what ultimately caused a major swing.

They will get what they want. When the 30% tariffs and skyrocketing food prices and mass deportations hit, don't come crying to me.

I'm privileged enough to be able to weather this unless shit gets catastrophically bad. So fine, if this is what you want, America, go for it.

The fact that we are AGAIN blaming the candidate shows all that is wrong with American mentality.

The candidates are rich and pretty old and will do fine

It's you and your family being affected.

It's time to stop blaming the candidate and start blaming the actual voters, who are deciding their own fate

The day Americans stop thinking of elections as popularity contests where they need spoon feeding and then they reward or punish the candidate and start thinking of it as choosing your and your family's future, will be the day populists start losing

No other democratic country has this mentality.

As I've said all along, if everyone who voted for Biden in 2020 came out for Harris in 2024, Trump had no chance of winning.

And the numbers bear that out.

Maybe the Democrats should have had a mini-primary, debates, and even a brokered convention to pick Biden's replacement.

Instead of letting the billionaire donors to the DNC put yet another unpopular 2016 primary candidate (even lower than last place Biden) in Biden's place less than 24 hours after Biden withdrew...

- Some catastrophe happens and Trump blames the nearest Democrat
- Trump bemoans the checks and balances that keep him from doing literally whatever he wants.
- International conflicts get worse but Trump doesn't talk about them so they're not considered his fault
- Some people in red and purple states will lose some rights, but not in a way that will make the news
- Some of Trump's new batch of cabinet members find out how incompetent he is and leave
- Two more conservatives get put on the Supreme Court, ensuring a supermajority for the next 40+ years
- Military leaders quietly prevent nuclear war while getting insulted for being "weak"
- Consumer prices stay the same or get worse, but Trump points to things that were already getting cheaper as proof that his policy works
- The policies Trump and Republicans pass ensure the rich accumulate more wealth, all while swearing it's for the middle class
- Trump teases all the good he could do for the country if only Congress gave him more power

No, the country won't turn into a fascist dictatorship overnight. It's just going to get incrementally worse, and the people who vote purely on their paycheck vs. their expenses and vibes are going to learn nothing, vote for the other side, wonder why utopia hasn't happened, vote back the other way, and so on and so forth.

I'm guilty of having so many poor takes on the election. I thought:

1. Trump's ceiling was 47% of the vote
2. Trump could never win the popular vote
3. Women would carry Harris over the finish line.

Admittedly I was wrong about it all. Though I was right about Harris being a poor candidate and Biden putting the Dem party in a difficult position by refusing to drop out sooner.

As always the Dem party will not learn from their mistakes.

Y'all buckle up for the second ride.

For everyone asking "how did Trump win this place that hasn't voted republican since XXXX" -- the answer is inflation. At the end of the day, inflation is what won Trump this election. COVID fucked everything up but the Average Joe doesn't understand how a pandemic led to grocery bills being out of this world. Biden and Kamala could've done more to curb corporate gouging, but they didn't tbh, and that's what lost the Dems this election. I don't think Trump will do any better, but the average voter is going to blame the incumbent for their high bills, not the guy saying he's going to fix the problem.

I think the United States is going to see a widening gap in culture and ideology between states going forward. There's a lot of urban/rural divide but there are still states that are overwhelmingly liberal vs overwhelmingly conservative. If you are significantly to the left and want that culture and lifestyle you're going to have to relocate to a state that is solidly blue. If you're staunchly conservative you will want to live in a state that is solidly red. This divide will continue to grow and the United States is only going to be very loosely one country with vastly different states within it. Honestly this may be for the best as there seem to be irreconcilable differences between the two.

Democrats at the top need to stop pandering for moderate republican votes. They keep moving center-right and it's a failing strategy. Keeping dinosaurs like Pelosi around doesnt help either. Parading Liz Cheney around was a mistake instead of focusing on the economic polices and healthcare policies. Harris's campaign which is arguably to the right of Biden's and Clinton's did worse than Clinton in 2016. It's time to listen to the progressives. Maybe we should take a look at why Bernie was so popular especially with younger people.
